

I oppose loosening the rules designed to promote and protect diversity of media ownership. These rules were adopted to ensure that the public would receive a diverse range of viewpoints from the media, and not simply the opinions of a handful of media conglomerates.

Despite the proliferation of websites and cable channels, I simply do not see the diversity of viewpoints that was promised. Rather, the companies that dominate the major media outlets now also dominate the web.

I urge the FCC not to loosen the current rules. The information that is crucial to our very democracy is at stake.
